SELF HELPING COMMUNITIES The Indian at the party, served with viands from a sideboard, remarked:

"Too many people helping Indian. Indian will help himself."

And he proceeded to do so. A great many Americans would find it easy to sympathics with the red man's point of view. As we look back, it is apparent that an outstanding fault of many past social service activities has been "too many people helping Indian", and not enough people helping Indian to help himself.

The average man and the average boy object to being fresch over. The experience of War Camp Community Service Love that fact hard upon the consciousness of the community workers whose business it was to minister to the comfort and recreational needs of the enlisted men. It was found that, given the tools, the opportunity and a touch of leadership, the uniformed men would go a long way in working out a satisfactory recreation programme. It was not that they did not need guidance. They did, and appreciated it. But they did not need and did not appreciate a condition in which there were "so many people belping Indian" that Indian bad no chance to help himself. Social relations, having in the past been so largely dictand by whim, tradition or prejudice, are seldom logical unless consciously and intelligently readjusted. Then, too, there is always the parodoxical situation that the more people there are to know in any one place, the harder it is to know any of them.

One of the present day social phenomena is the extent to which the words "Community Service" have got into the current vocabulary. It would be going too far to characterize Community Service as a new idea. As the term is used now adays, though, it could properly be said to stand for a new attitude. Community Service, peace-time ontgrowth of War Camp Community Service, reaches the individual by organizing the community, by making community life a conscious

It is impossible to establish community life by decree, just as it is impossible to establish friendship by compulsion. There are those who imagine that people can be gathered together. commanded to be sociable and left to their fate. Desirable community life is a growth. Moreover, there can be no community life where there is no community service. Unless community life is a growth, it is without roots, and exists as a superimposed structure. All of that throws us back to the starting point. It is the business of organized Community Service to see to it that there are not so many people helping Indian that Indian has no chance to help himself. Organized Community Service can supply the stimulus, the opportunity and initial direction, but the community must stand by reason of its own strength.
